Key points in brief

Please refer to the guidance notes that accompany the sales contract for more detailed information on each point.

The parties' obligations

Before entering into a contract, the Buyer confirms that the dog has been examined and found to be in good health. The Seller confirms that the Buyer has been informed of any faults/defects in the dog that are known to the Seller, any inherited conditions in the breed and of the dog's potential genetic disposition for these faults. If the dog has known faults or defects, the Seller is obliged to inform the Buyer of this. The purchase of the puppy/dog then takes place under special conditions and this must be stipulated in the contract.

It is recommended that the veterinary certificate should be issued no more than two weeks prior to the sale of the dog.

Entering into a contract - general points

A basic principle of Norwegian law is that there is freedom of contract. When the parties enter into an agreement for the purchase and sale of a dog, it is very important that both parties agree to the terms of the agreement. What is agreed should be recorded in a written contract.

Collecting the dog

According to the law on the sale of goods, the puppy/dog is considered to be delivered when the Buyer has collected it. It is wise to agree on a collection date for practical reasons, as this indicates at what point in time the risk is transferred to the Buyer.

Defects

The dog is considered to have a defect if it fails to match the description of what it is being sold as, or what a similar dog is usually sold as. If the Buyer demands that the purchase be terminated due to a serious defect, the dog must be returned to the Seller at the Seller's request, with a reimbursement of some or all of the purchase price.

If the dog is insured and the Buyer is paid the insurance sum, this should be taken into consideration in the final settlement between Buyer and Seller.

A defect is not deemed to exist if the Buyer was made aware of it before entering into the contract.

Making a complaint

If the Buyer discovers that the dog has what they think is a defect, the Buyer must inform the Seller of the situation: the Buyer must make a complaint. If the complaint is made too late, the claim could be dismissed even if the dog does actually have a defect.

Deposit

If the parties enter into a contract concerning a deposit (this should be in writing), it is deemed that an agreement has been made.

The NKK recommends that the deposit should not exceed 15 % of the purchase price.

Supplementary agreements/special conditions

If the parties so wish, they may agree to other terms under this point.

Insurance

The NKK recommends that the dog should be insured as soon as possible after collection. For the best conditions to apply, the puppy/dog should be insured before it is four months old.

Right to cancel

There is no possibility to cancel the contract when buying a dog.

This document was drawn up by the Norwegian Kennel Club (NKK) to serve as a neutral proposal for a contract between Buyer and Seller. Any disputes between the parties do not affect the NKK. The NKK cannot accept liability for any errors or omissions in this document.

We, the undersigned Buyer and Seller, hereby declare that we have closely studied this contract together.
